APA REFERENCES WORKSHEET ANSWERS

PY550: Research & Statistics
September 10, 2012
Example 1: Book with two authors

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper:
(Carpenter & Huffman, 2008)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper. (Smith, 2009)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper. (Bowers, 2007)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper. (Gaumnitz & Lere, 2004)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Example 5: Journal/Magazine Article from an online database, with DOI

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper. (Sigel, 2009)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Example 6: Journal Article from an Electronic Database (University Library)

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper. (Lovejoy, 2002)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Example 7: Online Newspaper/Magazine Article

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper. (Gibson, 2011)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Example 8: Website, no author, & no date

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper. ("A Short Guide," n.d.)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Example 9: Video Weblog (YouTube Video)

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper. (Gallagher, 2009)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Example 10: Online Course Material

Here’s what it should look like, if the citation were entered here in the body of your paper. ("Drafting Your Research," 2009)

And here’s how it looks in the References section at the end of your paper:

Drafting your research paper. (2009). Retrieved from University of Phoenix Research Writing Course Website.